Latch & Link System Components

SAFETY

The Camlock Buckle has a fully CNC machined 6061-T6 billet aluminum housing with hardened steel tumblers to lock each of the belt tabs into place. The belts can be snapped in one at a time for ease of use. All belts are instantly released when the release lever is lifted. The release lever is designed to prevent accidental separation.

The Latch & Link Buckle is an exclusive Simpson design that prevents inadvertent release. The compact, forged latch and link reduces size and weight by 30%. Note: This same compact Latch & Link buckle is used on the Sternum Latch shoulder harnesses (described below). A cushioned pad is furnished beneath all sternum latches.

Lap Belts

Lap belts (except wrap-around mount) have the end plates sewn on. All lap belts use 3" wide webbing and are sold in sets (each seat uses one set).

Pull-up adjustment requires you to pull up from the floor to tighten belts. This is best for applications (such as Formula cars) with limited driver maneuverability. Pull-down adjustment requires you to pull down towards the floor to tighten belts. This requires more driver elbow room (i.e. sedans).

Shoulder Harnesses

All shoulder harnesses are furnished with removable bolt-in end plates. A 3-bar adjuster is used to attach these end plates. This allows for a wide range of adjustment during installation. To convert to a wrap-around mount, simply remove the bolt-in end plates. To convert to a snap-in mount for use with an eyebolt, just purchase the appropriate snap-in hardware found on page 28. All of these shoulder harnesses use 3 inch webbing and are sold in sets (one set covers one seat).

H-Type Shoulder Harnesses have a connecting strap behind the driver's neck to help the straps from slipping off the driver's shoulders.

We stock many more versions of Simpson harnesses than we can show here. Please call or visit our website for more options, including 2" shoulder straps for HANS®!

Shoulder Harnesses with Sternum Latch

This factory modification holds the shoulder harness together in front of the driver to insure that the shoulder straps stay in the proper position to provide maximum protection. The shoulder straps are made with 3 inch wide webbing. A cushioned pad behind the latch prevents the sternum latch from causing discomfort to the driver.

Some sanctioning organizations may not allow the use of Shoulder Harnesses with a Sternum Latch. If in doubt, check your rule book or ask a tech inspector before ordering.

These straps help hold the lap belt buckle in the correct position for maximum protection. Just like the shoulder harnesses described above, these straps are equipped for bolt-in mounting but can be converted to snap-in or wrap-around mount. Length is set when the strap is installed except on the adjustable versions, which have quick-adjust sliders for on-the-fly adjustments, as in multiple-driver cars. All use 1.75" wide webbing.
